OCTOBER 2014

Greetings!

As the days get shorter and each morning cooler, one can feel the change in the air; and change is in the air here at the Westwood Senior Center. As your new COA Director, I would like to introduce myself. I live in Holliston and am married with two sons. I was the Director of the Holliston COA for nine years and have spent most of my career working on elder issues...seniors are my passion.

I have had the pleasure of meeting some of you and look forward to meeting more of you. Thanks to everyone who have stopped by to welcome me and offer kind words. The COA staff, Town Hall employees and Center volunteers have been so kind and friendly; thank you all.

I also know that Pat was beloved, so I will work hard to fulfill what are obviously very big shoes. My goal is to cultivate the roots that have been planted and help the Center grow. The physical Center building is beautiful and with a little "tweaking", I know we can find room for more programming. Moreover, if you have any ideas for new programs or suggestions on what we need to do, please know that my door is always open.

I am honored to be here and I look forward to meeting everyone, so stop by and say hi.

ASK A LAWYER

The attorneys at the Dedham law firm of Samuel, Sayward & Baler LLC will answer a question each month related to estate planning or elder law issues such as wills, trusts, probate, estates, Medicaid, or veteran's benefits. Please feel free to submit your questions anonymously by dropping them in the Ask a Lawyer Box.

This month's question is:

Q. I see a lot of ads in the paper for retirement communities, and I read about places called CCRC's. What are these and who are they appropriate for?

A. The acronym "CCRC" stands for "continuing care retirement community." CCRCs provide different living options for seniors and also provide a continuum of care as it is needed. These communities may include independent living units (single family units, townhomes, and/or apartments), an assisted living facility, a nursing home, and a memory care unit or facility all on the same campus.

Some CCRCs require residents to pay a large entry fee when they move in, which is typically refundable to the resident's estate at their death. Residents of CCRCs also pay a monthly fee to reside in the community. In exchange, CCRCs typically provide some number of meals each month, transportation, organized activities, housecleaning, and other services. In some CCRCs, residents pay for care as they need it. In other CCRCs, typically those with higher entry and monthly fees, the cost of some or all of a resident's future care may be fully covered.

CCRCs can be a good place to live for couples where on person needs assisted living or nursing home care while the other is still able to live independently, but wants to be near their spouse, and enjoys the activities and services that a CCRC provides. They are also a good fit for many seniors who do not enjoy living alone or have a difficult time getting around by themselves, since CCRCs can allow them to connect with other residents, participate in clubs and activities, and take advantage of the transportation provided for shopping or cultural events. The number of CCRCs in Massachusetts is growing. Each one is different in terms of the services they provide to their residents, the cost of being a resident, the care provided to the residents, and the cost of that care. If you are considering a CCRC, ask a lot of questions and read the lease agreement and other documents carefully. An experienced elder law attorney can help you evaluate the pros and cons of different CCRCs, review the agreements with you, and help you decide which CCRC is right for you.

Attorney Maria C. Baler is an elder law attorney, and a partner with Samuel, Sayward & Baler LLC. For more information visit www.ssbllc.com or call 781/461-1020.
